

Assets and Giving Trends of Canada's Grantmaking Foundations

KEY FACTS AND FIGURES

In 2014, Philanthropic Foundations Canada and Imagine Canada conducted a first ever study of the 160 largest grantmaking charitable foundations which includes the ten largest community foundations in Canada. This fact sheet summarizes the findings of the study, drawn from the report Assets and Giving Trends of Canada's Grantmaking Foundations. The detailed report looks at data for assets and gifts over the period from 2002 to 2012, with a particular focus on grants made between 2009 and 2011 and provides further information on the definitions and data sources that support this analysis.

Whether by assets or by grants, the largest foundations have an important role to play in Canadian philanthropy. The 160 largest foundations by assets account for nearly half (46%) of total assets held by Canadian foundations. The 160 largest foundations by grants account for one quarter of total foundation grants made. The foundations studied in this report are ones that maintain active ongoing grantmaking programs and that provide discretionary support to unrelated grant recipients. They were identified by the value of their assets and also by the value of the grants they made. This approach results in two groups of the largest foundations, one by assets and one by grants. The two groups overlap significantly, but not entirely. Thus, the findings of the report are presented separately for the largest foundations by assets and the largest foundations by grants. Community foundations, which are public foundations, are discussed separately from grantmaking foundations, the majority of which are private.

Grantmaking Foundations by Assets

■ Assets among grantmaking foundations are highly concentrated. In 2012, the 150 largest grantmaking foundations (see p.5 for information on the largest community foundations) reported total assets of $18.7 billion equivalent to nearly three-quarters (73%) of total assets held by all grantmaking foundations.

Top Foundations

■ Assets are not evenly distributed within the group. The six largest foundations (with 2012 assets of $500 million or more) account for almost half (49%) of total assets held by the top 150. The next 25 foundations (with 2012 assets of between $100 million and just under $500 million) account for a further twenty-two percent of assets.

by Location

- Nearly three-quarters of the 150 largest grantmaking foundations by assets are located in Ontario and Quebec. Collectively they account for eighty-eight percent of assets held by the top 150.
- Over the past ten years, the total value of assets held by the largest 150 grantmaking foundations has more than doubled in constant dollars, increasing from just over $8.8 billion in 2002 to $18.7 billion in 2012.

*The above list excludes foundations that fund primarily outside Canada or primarily fund a single institution.

by Grants

- The largest foundations are significant givers. In 2012, the 150 largest grant-making foundations (ranked by value of grants) reported making $966 million in grants. This is equivalent to fifty-seven percent of total grants by grantmaking foundations. This also represents an increase of almost three-quarters (73%) from the $558 million (in constant dollar terms) reported in 2004.
- Much of the total value of grants comes from a small number of large grantmakers. In 2012, the eight grant-making foundations that gave $20 million or more accounted for 28% of the total value of grants made by the largest foundations. The next 18 (with gifts between $8 million and $20 million) accounted for a further 23% of grants.

- Membership in the group of largest foundations by grants fluctuates over time because of the discretion that foundations have to disburse larger amounts in a given year. Three fifths of the largest foundations in 2012 were not among the 150 largest in 2002. Thirty eight of them did not exist prior to 2002.
- In 2012, the 10 largest corporate foundations (ranked by value of grants)

Grants by Funding Areas in 2011

- Support is distributed across many granting areas with Education and Research as a clear leader. In 2011, in terms of total value, foundations gave the most support to grantees in Education and Research (28% of the total value of grants), followed by Social Services (16%), Health (15%), Religion (9%) and Arts and Culture (8%). Grantmaking and Voluntarism received 6%, International received 6% and Environment received 4%.
- About two-thirds (66%) of the total value of grants went to grantees in Ontario and Quebec. On average the top 150 grantmaking foundations allocate seventy-eight percent of the total value of grants within their home region.

COMMUNITY FOUNDATIONS

Community Foundations by Assets

- Assets within the community foundation field are highly concentrated. In 2012, the 10 largest community foundations by assets reported total assets of just under $2.8 billion, equivalent to 82% of total assets held by community foundations. However this concentration is decreasing. It is noticeably less than the 91% of assets that the ten largest foundations held in 2002.
- Many of the largest foundations have a long history, particularly in the West of Canada, where half of them are located. The shifts in concentration of assets show the rapid growth among smaller (and generally more recent) community foundations.

Community Foundations by Grants

- The ten largest community foundations by value of grants reported $147 million in grants in 2012. This is equivalent to 88% of the value of grants made by all community foundations ($168 million). This is also nearly double the $86 million (in constant dollars) that they granted in 2002.
- The largest community foundations distribute their grants slightly differ-
